Price of old-style relay protection screen

AI Overview

Vintage relay protection screens, such as those by Herman Miller, typically range from $150 to $400 depending on condition, age, and rarity.

Current Market Pricing

• Etsy Listings: A 1980s Herman Miller relay screen by Kathy Stanton, made of corrugated orange plastic with black trim, is listed in excellent condition for around $250–$350. Prices vary based on minor scratches, sun fading, and overall wear consistent with age and use . Another vintage MCM relay screen listing shows similar pricing for collectible mid-century modern designs .
• eBay Listings: Vintage relay switches and retro industrial relays are available, with prices ranging from $50 to $400, depending on brand, rarity, and functionality . Rare models, such as Westinghouse or over-voltage relays, can command higher prices due to collector interest .

Factors Affecting Price
• Condition: Screens without cracks, with minimal fading or scratches, fetch higher prices.
• Manufacturer/Designer: Items by Herman Miller or notable designers like Kathy Stanton are more valuable.
• Rarity: Limited production or unique color schemes increase collectible value.
• Platform: Etsy tends to feature higher-end collectible items, while eBay offers a broader range including functional industrial surplus.
