

What does optical cable quota mean

AI Overview

The optical cable set quota process determines the material, labor, and cost factors for fiber optic cable installations, including splice closures, cable cores, and installation methods.

Overview of Optical Cable Quota

The optical cable set quota is a standardized method used to calculate the resources required for fiber optic installations. It includes material costs, labor, and mechanical handling factors for different types of cables and splice closures. The quota ensures that project planning, budgeting, and procurement are consistent and reflect the actual requirements of the installation .

Key Components of the Quota Process

- Cable Type and Core Count
- The quota is calculated based on the number of cores in the cable. For example, a three-core power cable is considered the baseline, while five-core or six-core cables have multiplicative factors applied to account for additional labor and materials .
- Single-core cables are adjusted with a factor of 0.67, while five-core cables use a factor of 1.3, and six-core cables use 1.6 for labor, materials, and machinery .
- Material Factors
- The type of conductor (aluminum or copper) affects the quota. Aluminum core cable is the standard, while copper core requires a 1.2 multiplier for manual, material, and mechanical costs .
- Double-shielded cables have a 1.05 multiplier to account for additional handling a...
